Fashion illustration templates pdf

Learn to make the right proportions makes all the difference in the world, and when you have made your basic fashion croc, you are ready to make different fashion figures templates that will help you paint clothes faster and with ease. When you have created your main leading fashion figure, then it's time to sketch other fashion poses and different views. You can start with crockery, which is very useful when you want to show off your designs or illustrate clothes that have interesting details about the back. Then it is good to have some croc on the sides, as you will probably have some dresses with a long tail or hi-lo hem, which is best illustrated in this pose. When you have these two croc ready, then it's time to have fun and work on different types of fashion figures that will compliment your design work or make a basis for beautiful illustrations. The view from behind can be used if you have a beautiful piece of cord on a dress or embellishment, which makes the garment special. The overall proportions of the rear view are the same as the front view, which shows different parts of the body. You can use the measurement line and axis from the previous publication and just start sketching the back of the body. From the view from behind, the neck looks shorter as it sinks into the shoulder. You will have blades showing the nearest part with 2 heads. They should be at a distance of about 1/2 head on both sides of the axis line at the narrowest point. The waist is at 3 and the hips are 4 and at the front. The bottom is at 4 and has rounded cheeks. The rest of the figure is the same as the front, except that we see the backs of the elbows and knees. When you want to show a side seam or clothes that are mounted at the waist and hips, then it is great to have a side view croc by hand. The side view is not symmetrical, so there will be no need for an axis, but rather a balance line that shows how body weight is maintained. For the upright figure with the legs together, the balance goes from the top of the head and passes between the legs. If you have a fashionable posture, where the weight is on the leg, then the balance passes through the leg. Side view of the head looks like an oval in a diagonal position. The neck begins at the base of the skull on the back, and the front of the neck begins above the lowest point of the jaw. From a side view, the torso tilts a little forward and the balance line passes over the shoulder and back of the waist. The lower torso follows the curve of the back and creates a curve in the spine. Balance line passes through the hips and back of the knee. The lower leg then curves back behind the equilibrium line. The legs are usually drawn with the heel raised, as if the model was wearing high heels. When you have side views with your feet together, then you can try to draw different variations of the side view, such as with one foot in front of the other, raised hands or posing as walking. Besides and side view, it is also good to sketch a 3/4 view with one hand on the thigh, which is often used in a fashion illustration. There are many other variants of these basic fashion poses and you can play as much as you want with different hand and foot positions and look for inspiration in fashion photography and editorial magazines.
